We do not keep the common German Wool, but make a specialty of this brand, as we feel it will insure better satisfaction, and ladies that once try it will not use anything else.

We can offer it to you at the popular price of

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Coming Session and Season—Street Scenery—Senator Thurman May Not Retire.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29th, 79.

Although the Congressional session and social season will be upon us very soon there is very little at this time to indicate their approach. The city is not as full of visitors as it was last week, when the unveiling of the Thomas statue attracted thousands of strangers to the capital. All prospects are to the effect that we will have an unusually interesting session and that vanity will glitter with unenvied splendor.

There is little to suggest the approach of the session except the scrubbing, cleaning, carpet-tacking going on in every boarding-house, from the plain, cheap house, to the fashionable one, usually occupied by Southern Congressmen, to the more pretentious, expensive, effected by lobbyists and government clerks.

Here and there about the Departments, looking after the interests of their fair government-pensioned proteges, or trying to find or make vacancies for more proteges, may be seen a Senator or member of the lower house, but it takes more than one swallow to make a summer.

The Washington elite—belle, bonux, duennas and their families are re-established in their hospitable homes, and Pennsylvania avenue is every day, between the hours of three and five p. m., gay with a driving, promenading throng of jaunty government clerks of both sexes who receive, I do not say earn, from $72 to $150 per month; uniformed military and naval officers who have served their country on this field for years; ministers and attaches of foreign legations, distinguished for the freshness and perfection of their gloves, (they get their duty free) their whiskers, high heeled shoes and ill-fitting clothes.

The belles from large cities and frontier villages have not arrived. They will not come until after the holidays, when the season with its vortex of receptions—presidential, cabinet, judicial, official and non-official—will begin to whirl with its appy or supernatant dandies in black swallowtails and white neckties, with ladies in trains and demi-trains.

Correspondents of the different journals have arrived, male and female, young and old, each prepared to describe, as he sees it, the social and political panorama that pivots in Washington.

There is gossip to the effect that Senator Thurman will not be retired to private life as promptly as was expected, when it was known that his State had pronounced for a Republican Senator. It is said that there is a movement on foot to return him to the House of Representatives from the Columbus district. Senator Thurman was a member of the House just thirty-four years ago. While it may be considered a descent on the political ladder to step from the Senate to the House, there are not wanting illustrious precedents. President Adams was elected to represent his district in the lower house after he had held the highest office in the gift of the people.
Andrew Johnson was Senator after he had been President, and President Tyler, after his executive term was honored by his immediate neighbors with the delicate office of overseer of a country road. And then there was our own Delano, who served in Grant's cabinet, who after his retirement to the classic shades of the Kokosing, was defeated by an honest farmer for the position of township road supervisor.

Senator Thurman sits in full vigor of physical and intellectual faculties, and his party in the House retain the majority he could be elected speaker almost by acclamation, or he might lead the minority and in no way would his position be less brilliant. Democratic leadership in the history of the Senate.

Figures that show an increase of the Circulating Medium.

Very few people are aware that there has been an enormous inflation of the currency within the last twelve months. Not that sort of inflation that the Greenbacks have been hawking for, but a genuine increase of the circulating medium, consisting of an enlarged supply of gold and silver coin and an increase of National bank circulation, which is, as we shall see, well known by United States bonds.

The report of the Director of the Mint will show that there has been an increase in the amount of gold and silver coin in circulation, amounting to $150,000,000, or sixteen months of more than $150,000,000.
This has been by coinage and importation—$150,000,000 more in gold and silver coin than we had on the 1st of July, 1878.

How to Recover a Lost Watch.

Horace Wedge, of Long Hill, Bridgeport, went out shooting recently, and returned at night after a tramp covering several miles of ground. After his return home he felt for his watch and found it was missing. He then remembered that at Stepien Depot, earlier in the day, he and his companion had pulled out their watches and compared them with the depot clock; but this was worth nothing as an indication for finding the lost property, as they have tramped a weary road since then. That or the following night he dreamed that he saw his watch lying near a beach-tree, in a run near Long Hill, where they had killed a couple of birds, and so vivid was the dream that the following day he resolved to go and take a look for the watch. He found the tree he saw in his dream without difficulty, and lying near it, just as he pictured in his dream, he found the missing watch safe and sound.

The wealthiest man in Kalamazoo, Mich., was approached in the streets by an excited little boy, who said: "Mister, my sister is in a funny way; if you'll get her out I'll give you a dollar."

The man recovered the imperiled child. A few days afterward the boy entered his office and handed him a dollar in small coin, having broken open a toy bank and sold shrub by the name of a dollar.

If you call on your druggist for "Dr.
Sellers' Cough Syrup," he will give you immediate relief and cure on short notice.

IN A TIME OF TROUBLE.

As an eagle, from the height, Looking down upon the lands,
On forest black as night, Fair fields and desert sands.

Sees the traveler below Losing heart, as league on league, Lowliness shows
No end to his fatigue.

So faith, amid her stars, Beholding far beneath
The bright of gloomy bars In the web of life and death.

Sees weary hearts that deem The dark breath is good as leagu, Sees happy hearts that dream The bright rays all their goal.

Ah! let this faith be ours—That even mid the pain, Above the present towers,
And the morrow's pain;

While, breath by breath, appears,
As from the weary land,
The pattern of the years Which God himself has planned.

THE MARKED ARM.

Click! In the dead of the night a sharp sound awakened Mrs. Halifont. The room was dark. Not even a gleam of moon or starlight fell through the curtains of the window. She was sitting up in bed, and indeed, but she saw nothing, heard nothing but the click.

She sat up, leaning on her dimpled left arm, and put out her right hand and touched her husband's shoulder. He lay upon his pillow sound asleep, and did not wake at her touch.

"It must have been a dream," said Mrs.
Halifont, and her young head, which was only a few weeks from the world, was slept again.

The light of the sound did not arouse Mrs.
Halifont. It was her husband who awakened. He did not pause to listen, but grasped the revolver beneath his pillow and jumped out of bed at once. In an almost imperceptible way, he was in the middle of the room, and he was looking down at the floor.

A man of courage, a man who never hesitated in the face of danger—one, too, who was a little of the old-fashioned type, Mrs. Halifont strode at once into the room where he knew house-breakers were at work, and running in the dark against a powerful man, tackled him at once.

The light of a lantern flashed across the room. There were two more men. Three against one.

A shower of blows, struggling, and the reports of a pistol, aroused the young wife once more. Amid her terror she had the good sense to light the gas. It shone upon a spectacle of horror. Her husband, wielding a terrible mark—a mark she had seen once before. She knew its shape and size and color. Her eyes had been riveted upon it as the sinewy hand, at the wrist of which it ended, grasped her dying husband's arm.

Suddenly Colonel Humphries felt himself grasped by a hand that, small as it was, had the force of a tiger's paw.

The fingers closed over that red mark—a white face came close to his.

"You are my husband's murderer!" hissed a voice in his ear.

Then the two stood staring at each other in dumb amazement.

He made no denial; he only looked down at the red mark upon his arm and cursed it aloud.

"How dared you to make love to me?" he hissed.

"Because I loved you," he said. "Woman, if I had not fallen in love with you that night, I would have killed you also.
It was risking my life to spare you, you know, at our watches calling me to hunt you down."

"Oh, if you had but killed me then!" she moaned.

"Well, I am at your mercy now," he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.

"You can kill I wish you would,"
he said.
